This is my last blog for the year. It's dead week and next week we have finals. I'm not really nervous for finals and haven't began studying yet. I have a final for math, history, and folklore and I'm sure that history will be my hardest by far. I'm looking forward to finishing finals and going home for a couple weeks and seeing all of my friends. It was nice to see them over thanksgiving break but it went by so fast. I'm also looking forward to Christmas and seeing family and family friends as well. Tonight is the holiday dinner at Carson and I'm really looking forward to it. It is going to be the best meal at Carson by far. There is supposed to be salmon, chicken, potatoes, egg nog, cider, ravioli and much more. I can't wait.

This term so far has been a lot of fun and a great new experience. I've had a lot of fun in my first year of college so far. Everything has been cool, from the dorm life, to parties, to football games, and everything else. I'm sure the next two quarters will be just as fun.

Yesterday at Fred Meyer I spent 72 dollars. Fred Meyer is the greatest store known to man. I bought a ton of a food and an awesome bath robe which I will now be wearing everywhere I go. I also got a bonsai tree which I have in my room. It brings peace, balance, and zen into my room. Can't wait for the weekend.

How Long til the Weekend?

November 15th, 2010 by coleb

This week has probably been my busiest week here so far. I've actually had to do some sort of homework and/or studying for a couple hours each night. Along with that I have two midterms this week. I had one on wednesday and have another one tomorrow at eight in the morning. This week is the first time I've actually gone to the library to do work, which is where I am right now. For once I actually feel like I got all my work done. I'll probably be making many more trips to the library now. We finally won our first flag football game yesterday. It took us the entire season to finally get it down but we finally won and the best part was we got fruit snacks and juice boxes after the game just like the good old days. For the most part, most of our floor spends the majority of the week looking forward to the weekend and now every week I set a countdown on my phone for the weekend. Its set for 4:10 pm on Friday which is the time when everyone on our floor has had their last class and is back for the alarm to go off. Starr hurry up with your work so I can leave the library and go back to the dorms and go to sleep. One more day til the weekend. I can't wait. And then its only like three more weeks til winter break. This quarter is going by really fast.

Black and Yellow

November 12th, 2010 by coleb

I have fallen behind in my blogs so I have to write two of them today. This blog post is actually about last week while the next one will be about this week. Last week was the final home football game I'm going to this year. It was against Washington and for the first half it was a lot closer than I expected. However, we pulled away in the end and won by almost 40. I still hate folklore but I guess its getting a little more interesting. We are finally learning about something other than just what folklore is. We've now moved on to different types of folk music as well as folk religions. The class is getting better but its still no where near enjoyable, instead spending most of the time drawing and not listening. I still haven't started my folklore project and I'm starting to worry that I won't finish it in time now. I just realized that its due a week from tomorrow and I haven't even done my interview, or began to research, or began to write it. Hopefully I'll be ok since I'm writing it on baseball which is a topic I'm very familiar with. I also have a research essay for writing that I need to get started on. Even though its not due as soon as the folklore paper is due its still 8-10 pages and worth a lot of my grade. Luckily I've started this paper since we have to turn in different steps in the process of writing this paper such as a bibliography and outline. I think this essay will be a lot easier than the folklore one.

Go Giants

October 30th, 2010 by coleb

This weekend is halloween weekend and so far its been disappointing. We spent all of last night walking around for 2 hours looking for a party to go to and found nothing. I am a old school basketball player for halloween with a headband and high socks and short shorts. Hopefully tonight is not the same. This past week has been a long but the Giants are in the World Series! Right now they are leading the series 2-0 and game three is tonight. I really want to go home and try to go to a game but its way too much work and money.

This week was also the end of my midterms. I had my folklore midterm on monday and got back my math midterm as well as the folklore one. I did better than i expected on both of them. I got a 100 on my math midterm and a 98 on folklore. I'm happy that they are finally done and don't have to worry about them again for a couple of weeks. However, I didn't do to well on my history midterm. I got a c- which is actually less than I expected. I guess next time I'll just have to study more and hope I do better.

I can't wait to go get Carson brunch this morning, it might be the highlight of the weekend. It is the perfect thing to follow up a long night. Hopefully they have some eggs, and bacon, and hashbrowns or potatoes.

Talking about it is making me hungry so I think I'm gonna go eat.

Midterms

October 21st, 2010 by coleb

This week I had my first midterm. I probably didn't study as much as I should have but when I was about to take the test I felt confident and thought I was prepared for the test. However, I found out today when I got my midterm back that I didn't do as well as I thought I was going to do. I got a C- and made some stupid mistakes but also probably should have studied more. I have my next midterm tomorrow in math and I haven't really studied at all yet. I also have no idea how to do the most recent two sections of the chapter since I didn't go to class on Monday or Tuesday. Hopefully I'll find some time tonight to study sometime after the game. Tonight is the UCLA vs Oregon game and we are currently ranked 2nd in the country. I also have another midterm on Monday in Folklore. Right now I feel like I'm gonna fail that midterm since I have no idea what's is going on in that class. I probably learned more today in our discussion than I did in all of the previous 4 weeks of the class. So far I hate folklore and its easily my least favorite class this year.

Last night we had flag football game and it went a lot better than I expected. Our team got put in Division 1 which is the best division because it was the only spot left. We thought we were going to get killed last night but ended up only losing 22-12 which is surprising since 3 of the players on the other team are on the Oregon Basketball team. Overall it was a successful game since we finally actually scored in a game. That's all. Go ducks tonight!

I Love Cheesy Grillers

October 14th, 2010 by coleb

I've decided to dedicate this entire blog to all of the great food I have eaten since I've been here at the University of Oregon. First off, the food on campus is surprisingly not as bad as I expected it to be. One of my favorite things is the Cheesy Griller, which is a grilled cheese. I recommend the cheesy griller with cheddar cheese and bacon but I also want to try a Cheesy Griller with all 3 meat options and both types of cheese. Another one of my favorite snacks is the Whammy. The Whammy is similar to a blizzard from Dairy Queen but better. You can get two toppings on it and it only costs 3 points. I've only had a Whammy once but I got peanut butter cups and caramel and it was amazing. Also the buffet at Carson is surprisingly not bad and seems to have a different meal every time, also the pizza is delicious at Carson.

There are also several great places to eat off campus. My favorite place is easily Dough Co. So far I have had 4 of the 31 calzones on the menu and my goal is to have all 31 by the time the school year is over. So far my personal favorite is the BBQ Chicken Zone. The other amazing thing about Dough Co. is that they deliver to the dorms til 3 in the morning and its only 6.25 for a calzone plus a dollar for delivery. Another really good place to go eat off campus is Track Town Pizza. Track Town has the best pizza and it has great deals for students. The best deal is the after 10 special where any medium pizza with two toppings is only 10 dollars after 10 pm. Overall, the food so far has been much better than I expected and I am actually about to go get a Cheesy Griller right now.

First Blog 10/7/2010

October 7th, 2010 by coleb

My first two weeks of college at the University of Oregon have been very interesting, fun, and busy. So far I have had many experiences that I feel like I will never forget. The first two weeks of school have been busy and I already feel like I have had more reading than I did in all 4 years of high school. Some of my classes are interesting while others are much more boring. This past weekend was really fun as well. Over the weekend there was a home football game against Stanford and the whole thing was fun. We stayed up all night Friday and went to College Gameday at 4 in the morning. Then we came back and took a nap and got up and went to the game. The game was awesome especially since we ended up winning.

Overall, I really like the floor that I'm on too. We all get along well and hang out together all the time. This helped make adjusting to living away from home much easier because I was having fun right away. One of the hardest parts of adjusting to college for me is the amount of work and actually having to go to school again. Coming back from such a long summer break made it a lot more difficult to get used to having to actually do school work again. The work load has been much more than I'm used to from high school but I'm getting used to it and usually finish most of my homework. Overall, these first two weeks have been a lot of fun and I look forward to the rest of my freshman year.

tomorrow and I haven't even done my interview, or began to research, or began to write it. Hopefully I'll be ok since I'm writing it on baseball which is a topic I'm very familiar with. I also have a research essay for writing that I need to get started on. Even though its not due as soon as the folklore paper is due its still 8-10 pages and worth a lot of my grade. Luckily I've started this paper since we have to turn in different steps in the process of writing this paper such as a bibliography and outline. I think this essay will be a lot easier than the folklore one.

Go Giants

Saturday, October 30th, 2010

This weekend is halloween weekend and so far its been disappointing. We spent all of last night walking around for 2 hours looking for a party to go to and found nothing. I am a old school basketball player for halloween with a headband and high socks and short shorts. Hopefully tonight is not the same. This past week has been a long but the Giants are in the World Series! Right now they are leading the series 2-0 and game three is tonight. I really want to go home and try to go to a game but its way too much work and money.

This week was also the end of my midterms. I had my folklore midterm on monday and got back my math midterm as well as the folklore one. I did better than i expected on both of them. I got a 100 on my math midterm and a 98 on folklore. I'm happy that they are finally done and don't have to worry about them again for a couple of weeks. However, I didn't do to well on my history midterm. I got a c- which is actually less than I expected. I guess next time I'll just have to study more and hope I do better.

I can't wait to go get Carson brunch this morning, it might be the highlight of the weekend. It is the perfect thing to follow up a long night. Hopefully they have some eggs, and bacon, and hashbrowns or potatoes. Talking about it is making me hungry so I think I'm gonna go eat.

Midterms

Thursday, October 21st, 2010

This week I had my first midterm. I probably didn't study as much as I should have but when I was about to take the test I felt confident and thought I was prepared for the test. However, I found out today when I got my midterm back that I didn't do as well as I thought I was going to do. I got a C- and made some stupid mistakes but also probably should have studied more. I have my next midterm tomorrow in math and I haven't really studied at all yet. I also have no idea how to do the most recent two sections of the chapter since I didn't go to class on Monday or Tuesday. Hopefully I'll find some time tonight to study sometime after the game. Tonight is the UCLA vs Oregon game and we are currently ranked 2nd in the country. I also have another midterm on Monday in Folklore. Right now I feel like I'm gonna fail that midterm since I have no idea what's is going on in that class. I probably learned more today in our discussion than I did in all of the previous 4 weeks of the class. So far I hate folklore and its easily my least favorite class this year.

Last night we had flag football game and it went a lot better than I expected. Our team got put in Division 1 which is the best division because it was the only spot left. We thought we were going to get killed last night but ended up only losing 22-12 which is surprising since 3 of the players on the other team are on the Oregon Basketball team. Overall it was a successful came since we finally actually scored in a game. Thats all. Go ducks tonight!

I Love Cheesy Grillers

Thursday, October 14th, 2010

I've decided to dedicate this entire blog to all of the great food I have eaten since I've been here at the University of Oregon. First off, the food on campus is surprisingly not as bad as I expected it to be. One of my favorite things is the Cheesy Griller, which is a grilled cheese. I recommend the cheesy griller with cheddar cheese and bacon but I also want to try a Cheesy Griller with all 3 meat options and both types of cheese. Another one of my favorite snacks is the Whammy. The Whammy is similar to a blizzard from Dairy Queen but better. You can get two toppings on it and it only costs 3 points. I've only had a Whammy once but I got peanut butter cups and carmel and it was amazing. Also the buffet at Carson is surprisingly not bad and seems to have a different meal every time, also the pizza is delicious at Carson.

There are also several great places to eat off campus. My favorite place is easily Dough Co. So far I have had 4 of the 31 calzones on the menu and my goal is to have all 31 by the time the school year is over. So far my personal favorite is the BBQ Chicken Zone. The other amazing thing about Dough Co. is that they deliver to the dorms til 3 in the morning and its only 6.25 for a calzone plus a dollar for delivery. Another really good place to go eat off campus is Track Town Pizza. Track Town has the best pizza and it has great deals for students. The best deal is the after 10 special where any medium pizza with two toppings is only 10 dollars after 10 pm. Overall, the food so far has been much better than I expected and I am actually about to go get a Cheesy Griller right now.

First Blog 10/7/2010

Thursday, October 7th, 2010

My first two weeks of college at the University of Oregon have been very interesting, fun, and busy. So far I have had many experiences that I feel like I will never forget. The first two weeks of school have been busy and I already feel like I have had more reading than I did in all 4 years of high school. Some of my classes are interesting while others are much more boring. This past weekend was really fun as well. Over the weekend there was a home football game against Stanford and the whole thing was fun. We stayed up all night Friday and went to College Gameday at 4 in the morning. Then we came back and took a nap and got up and went to the game. The game was awesome especially since we ended up winning.

Overall, I really like the floor that I'm on too. We all get along well and hang out together all the time. This helped make adjusting to living away from home much easier because I was having fun right away. One of the hardest parts of adjusting to college for me is the amount of work and actually having to go to school again. Coming back from such a long summer break made it a lot more difficult to get used to having to actually do school work again. The work load has been much more than I'm used to from high school but I'm getting used to it and usually finish most of my homework. Overall, these first two weeks have been a lot of fun and I look forward to the rest of my freshman year.

Black and Yellow

I have fallen behind in my blogs so I have to write two of them today. This blog post is actually about last week while the next one will be about this week. Last week was the final home football game I'm going to this year. It was against Washington and for the first half it was a lot closer than I expected. However, we pulled away in the end and won by almost 40. I still hate folklore but I guess its getting a little more interesting. We are finally learning about something other than just what folklore is. We've now moved on to different types of folk music as well as folk religions. The class is getting better but its still no where near enjoyable, instead spending most of the time drawing and not listening. I still haven't started my folklore project and I'm starting to worry that I won't finish it in time now. I just realized that its due a week from tomorrow and I haven't even done my interview, or began to research, or began to write it. Hopefully I'll be ok since I'm writing it on baseball which is a topic I'm very familiar with. I also have a research essay for writing that I need to get started on. Even though its not due as soon as the folklore paper is due its still 8-10 pages and worth a lot of my grade.
